Ms. Manji is the author of "The problem with Islam today, a Muslim's call for a reformed faith"; it is published in more than 30 countries. So far translations have been made into Arabic, Urdu and Farsi. The book has been downloaded two million times. Manji is a well-known critic of radical Islam and orthodox interpretations of the Koran. The New York Times has described her as "Osama bin Laden's worst nightmare". Manji discusses the role of women in Islam, the far-reaching hatred of Judaism and the existence of slavery in Islam-controlled countries.

Her documentary film "Faith without Fear" is now being screened across Europe and shown in the Muslim underground via digital technologies. Ms. Manji has just published her book, God, liberty and love.
